

I'm an average Internet user and concerned citizen who uses the web every day for personal and professional reasons. As CEO of an agricultural biotechnology company, I believe that it is critical to maintain net neutrality for the following reasons:

- If repealed, my company and I would lose equal access to mission-critical Internet content.
- My personal use of websites like Amazon, eBay, and dozens of other websites would be negatively impacted.

I am also convinced that FCC's role in the current net neutrality debate is to protect consumer interests, and not to defend the profits of giant ISP corporations.

Scaling back FCC's regulations over these ISPs will clearly have a detrimental effect on the great majority of Internet users like me.

Sincerely,
Jerry Feitelson, Ph.D.